Ayers Proposes Series of Joint Discussions Between Himself and Slemp.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Bristol, Va., September 16 .- Although the campaign committee representing General R. A. Avers, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Ninth Virginia District, closed the past week with a conference here that lasted un til late in the night, no information was given out. The Slemp headquar it is understood that nothing will be made public from that quarter in advance of Slemp's formal letter of ac ceptance, which is due on Wednesday of this week.

General Ayers, who said in his open-ing speech that he had no personal criticism to offer against Mr. Slemp. criticism to oner against Mr. Slemp, has since proposed a series of joint debates between himself and the representative. As to whether Slemp will agree to this will hardly be known until after his notification. It is not likely that Slemp will under take to discuss the issues all over the district, preferring to conserve his strength as much as possible. While there will, of course, be exceptions, it is expected that the mooses will pretty generally support Slemp.

Colonel W. A. Henderson, head of the Colonel W. A. Henderson, head of the legal department of the Southern Railway, and himself a veteran of the Civil War, will deliver the address before the Confederate veterans of Southwest Virginia and East Tennessee in this city on Thursday of this week. For a soldier to have his neck traversed by a bullet, passing out within a quarter of an inch of the spine, after entering at the point of the chim in the Crimean War in 1854—and then to survive for more than half a century, to fracture his left thigh by a fall in 1912, indicates an altogether remark-able vigor of constitution, and excep-tional vitality. Yet this is the most ecent of many accidents which have befallen the monogenarian general, the Duke of Grafton, who, wonderful to relate, is, according to dispatches, "doing well," and on the road to re-covery, thanks to the knitting of the broken bones.

While the duke is unknown in this country, his eldest son, the late Earl of Euston, a perfect giant, standing some six feet five in his stockings, and broad in proportion, was a familiar figure in the United States, which he frequently visited in connection with Masonic celebrations, as the represen-tative of the English lodges, and of their successive grand masters, Edward
